Highlights of data: Each Vernon College athletic team sent out grade reports for each course for each student athlete between February 27 and March 8. This included 37 baseball players, 23 softball players, 13 volleyball players, and 21 rodeo team members. Of those team members listed above: 3 baseball players, 4 softball players, 3 volleyball players, and 2 rodeo team members had grades that were below expectations and required intervention.

Use of data: Each coach met with the players who had grade issues individually. Most were required to attend additional study halls and contact the Pass Center or their instructor for additional help. Two student athletes dropped the courses in question. Rodeo team members were required to submit a second round of grade reports on April 11.

How associated to Student Success? Vernon College Athletics hopes that this early intervention in student athlete academics helps students to value and prioritize the role of an education in the student athlete's life on campus. The spring grade reports also give the coach to talk to team members about their major and the upcoming summer and fall advising sessions.
