AI and Microcredentials - Earning a degree, completing a professional training program, and testing for licensure are all ways today's professionals earn the credentials they need for a successful career. With more employers demanding AI skills, microcredentials in AI might be one way for colleges to engage new students and to better prepare them for the work force. Microcredentials can be earned individually online through short courses, through employer training programs, and now even on some college campuses. But these microcredentials are mightier than what a short course can teach. Learn more and register here.
